Lithographs, Etchings & Other Works, Théophile Alexandre Steinlen

Théophile Alexandre Steinlen was born in Lausanne, Switzerland and studied at the University of Lausanne. He is best known as an illustrator although he was also a printmaker, painter, and sculptor. He moved to Montmartre in Paris in the early 1880's and soon became a member of the artistic, literary, and musical circle that frequented the Chat Noir cabaret. The influence of Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec on his work is evident. Steinlen's social and political sympathies for the dispossessed and working-class men and women of Montmartre heavily informed his work as evidenced by his covers and illustrations for socialist journals such as Gil Blas illustré, Feuille, and L'Assiette au beurre. He also created lithographs and etchings portraying and immortalizing the tragedies and hardships of World War I.

The Boston Public Library's collection of Steinlen's works includes etchings, lithographs, and a drawing, together with a bronze relief of a cat in repose. The latter is one of a number of small cat sculptures that Steinlen created during the early years of the 20th century. See the complete collection here.

Getting Ready for Institutional Anniversaries...

On May 20, the Digital Commonwealth Membership Committee presented a workshop titled "Getting Ready for Institutional Anniversaries" at Brandeis University. The focus of the event were presentations by five panelists: Sarah Campbell (Assistant Archivist, College of the Holy Cross); Brendan Higgins (Public Services Librarian, Boston Conservatory at Berklee College of Music); Mary Bell (Assistant Director, Wilbraham Public Library); John Healey (Archives Librarian, Emmanuel College); and Heather Mumford (Archivist, T.H. Chan School of Public Health, Countway School of Medicine). They offered reflections on their experience planning, executing, and assessing recent anniversary events. Each of them touched upon the value of building partnerships with other departments, careful planning, and setting realistic goals and expectations. Audience members represented a wide variety of institutions, and asked questions about budgeting, publicity, and timelines. Attendees and presenters alike enjoyed hearing about other institutions' anniversaries and how different organizations celebrate these events.

DPLA and BiblioBoard Partner to Make Indie Author Collection Free for the Summer...

DPLA has announced a partnership with BiblioBoard's Indie Author Project, through which a collection of over thirty independently-published books are freely available for anyone to download and read now in the SimplyE app. BiblioBoard's Indie Author Project supports emerging, diverse, independent writers and promotes stronger relationships between self-published authors and local libraries. Through library partnerships across the country, the project provides programming that generate greater visibility and exposure for new and emerging writers and their works. The Summer Reading collection will be available until Labor Day (September 2).

Download the SimplyE app to your iOS or Android device. Use the library selector icon in the upper left corner, select Manage Accounts, then Add Library, and select Digital Public Library of America. Find the Indie Author Summer Reading collection in the top row.

New Digital Commonwealth Blogposts...

Focus on Context, Access, and Inequality: My Takeaway from the 2019 Digital Commonwealth Conference

Maxwell Lisanti is an MLIS student from Simmons who received a complimentary registration to the Annual Conference in April. Maxwell reported that the presentations "...energized me to continue to work towards using digitization as a tool to connect with marginalized communities and to create collections that are inclusive of new and necessary viewpoints." Read Maxwell's blogpost here.

Spotlight on...Peter Simon Collection

Anne Berard wrote a spotlight piece highlighting the very interesting Peter Simon collection. Simon was the son of Richard Simon of Simon and Schuster fame and the brother of Carly Simon of musical fame. Anne concisely traces his career and interests, nicely illustrated by photos representing his interest in Aquinnah, family, animals and politics. Read Anne's blogpost here.
