Featured New Collection...

This month the BPL added a collection of 114 etchings of Giovanni Battista Piranesi (1720-1778). Piranesi was one of the most important Italian printmakers of the period and his views of Rome continue to define modern ideas of the ancient city. Check out the full collection here.

Contextual Conversations:
Representation and Digital Practice

2020 Conference Update...

In the coming months leading up to the conference, we'll be featuring our various panelists and speakers. This month, we'll introduce our first panel, entitled "Politics, Ethics and Context in Digital Collections". The panel's charge is to follow up on points raised on these topics by Eben English at his luncheon keynote at the 2019 Conference. However you reacted to Eben's presentation if you were present, it certainly elicited a lot of feedback, which would tend to indicate that it's an important subject to consider. This panel will be led by distinguished scholar, Elizabeth Duclos-Orsello, Chairperson, Interdisciplinary Studies, Salem State University.

Elizabeth Duclos-Orsello

Other members of this panel will include Eben English, who has graciously agreed to be a panelist as well as give the Luncheon Keynote, Elizabeth Pope, Curator of Books at the American Antiquarian Society, and Jane Kelly, former Digital Archives Specialist, Web Archiving Assistant #metoo collection, Schlesinger Library, Harvard University.

“Getting Started with Digital Commonwealth” at Melville’s Arrowhead...

We were thrilled to be able to host a “Getting Started with Digital Commonwealth” event on October 18th at the Berkshire County Historical Society in Pittsfield, MA. Twenty-four people attended and many stayed on after the presentation for a tour of Herman Melville’s Arrowhead home. We also welcomed Amy Lafave, Executive Director of the Lenox Public Library, who talked about the benefits of hosting their collection on Digital Commonwealth. Thanks to Lesley Herzberg, BCHS Executive Director, for hosting us and to everyone that attended! Lesley first presented the Melville photo wall (top left) that includes Herman and his family. We also got to view the painting of Sarah Moorhead (top right) who it was rumored Melville had an affair with (check out “Melville in Love” by Michael Shelden). The windows in Melville’s study (bottom right) where he wrote Moby Dick point north. After the torrential rain and winds of the day before, we were fortunate to be treated to the same glorious view of Mount Greylock (bottom left) that Melville himself enjoyed. He was inspired by the constantly changing light on the mountain that reminded him of a giant whale.
